

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Steele Group Architects Makes Seamless Ownership Transition

Winston-Salem, N.C. (January 02, 2020) – Steele Group Architects has announced that founding principal Bill Steele has retired as of December 31st, 2019, ten years after beginning the firm in downtown Winston-Salem. Fellow long-time partners Matthew Rodda and Mike Osman have taken the helm of Steele Group Architects.

Steele Group Architects specializes in senior living, multifamily housing, civic and community projects, and commercial architecture. Over the years, the three principals have led the firm in building a reputation for designing spaces that are life-affirming and socially responsible, respecting the people who use them and the environment around them.

Bill Steele became an architect after starting his career as a licensed general contractor, making him particularly adept at leading and coordinating large-scale projects while paying close attention to detail. Steele will remain active in retirement as an advisor to the firm on special senior living projects.

“We’re happy for Bill and thrilled that he will continue to lend his expert advice in one of our core areas of business. We have experienced exponential growth in the senior living sector in recent years and we expect that to continue,” says Osman.

Moving forward, the firm will continue to focus on meeting clients’ objectives through collaboration and innovation with the leadership of Rodda, Osman, and an entire team of architecture professionals.

“Bill, Mike, and I have always had a seamless design for how we planned to evolve, adapt, grow, and transition the business,” says Rodda.

“That design continues to allow our people to enter new areas of professional development and to think more creatively on behalf of our clients,” Rodda continues. “It also allows us to plan for and adapt to changes extremely well.”

Recent projects completed by the firm include the Forsyth County Central Library in downtown Winston-Salem, N.C., which garnered high praise from the industry and the community, renovations and expansion at River Landing Continuing Care Retirement Community in Colfax, N.C., and the Cotton Mill Luxury Apartments in Simpsonville, S.C.

###

For questions about this release, please contact:

Matthew Rodda, 336-734-2003, matthew.rodde@steelegrp.com

Information about the firm can be found at steelegrouparchitects.com